SEC QUIZ HARD ON COCHRANE, TIGER PILOT

Washington, Feb. 17 (AP)—Major league baseball players know little about finance but they can make a life out of it on the stock market. Gordon Hughes, "Tiger" Cochrane, manager of the Detroit Tigers, submitted today before the Securities Exchange Commission.

Cochrane was called as a witness in the commission's inquiry into alleged market manipulation by Alvin Karpis and W. E. Hunter & Co., nationally known brokerage firm.

Cochrane recently told how he bought 1000 shares of Atlas at $12 per share and how he subsequently sold 400 shares at a profit of $2400.

TALKED TO JOE CRONIN

He testified that he had conversations with Joe Cronin, manager of the Boston Red Sox, George Wadsworth, Red Sox pitcher, and Del Baker, Tiger coach.

Questioned by Jacob Gruber, commission counsel, Cochrane admitted he knew very little about stocks and the operation of the stock market. Although he was quite active as a committee member, the Detroit manager said he consulted with the Hunter firm.

The commission has accused the Hunter firm of manipulating the price of Atlas stock up from $12 to $16 and a share between November 1935 and February, 1936.

"Were you in Detroit in early November?" Gruber asked.

"I don't remember," Cochrane replied.

DOESN'T REMEMBER

Where were you at that time?"

"I don't remember dates," Cochrane said. "I think I was in New York."

Cochrane remembered that Jerry McGraw, vice president of the Detroit Tigers, told him that Atlas stock Company was about to announce the sale of quantities of stocks, bonds and bills for use in automobile production and had advised him that the stock would be a good buy.

"You didn't know that this stock was purchased over the counter?" Gruber questioned.

"No sir," the witness admitted. "I don't know where it was bought."

5-CENT EL FARE HEARING HELD

Renewed demands for a five-cent fare on the Boston Elevated Rail way and the taking by eminent domain of the "32" property were made today before the legislative committee on transportation at a hearing in the State House.

W. Edwin Usher of Brookline is sponsor of the proposed legislation. He asks that the state purchase the Elevated assets at the present assessed valuation.

William R. Dorney, representing the "32" trustees, opposed the action of the bill to establish a five-cent fare. Such legislation would result in a substantial increase in the company's deficit, he said.

MOTHER, 23, FIGHTS TO REGAIN CHILD

Fall River, Feb. 17.—With fraud and deception charged, hearing was resumed today in probate court on the petition of a 23-year-old mother to vacate an adoption order by which she lost her young son last June to a sister-in-law.

The petition is by Mrs. Harriet Poirer, of Sunset avenue, Methuen, and through it she seeks to regain custody of four-year-old George Poirer.

Last June, in probate court here, Judge Mayhew R. Hitch ruled in favor of the adoption order given by the boy to Mrs. Poirer, the husband of the late Poirer, the husband whom the petitioner charges with tricking her into signing adoption papers.

At the first hearing January 8, Mrs. Poirer testified that she and her husband were playing a game and that he covered up a number of papers with books, leaving only the signature open.

Then, she said, he challenged her to write her name in such a small space. She did so, thinking she was merely writing on blank paper.

Back on the stand today, the young wife and mother testified that during their separation and divorce, she frequently gave him money.

The husband himself testified today and admitted that he was brought into court on a non-support charge, but that he and his wife later agreed to live together again.

He admitted, however, that two days after this agreement was made he filed papers for adoption of the child by his sister and brother-in-law.

Boston after DARK

By

GEORGE HOLLAND

THIS KIND OF A DILEMMA IS NOT UNUSUAL among the headliners, but because Olsen and Johnson, the comedians, are trying to solve the problem of "what to do" right here in Boston, it may be interesting. . . . From agents in England, they are being stormed by cable urging acceptance of an engagement for "Coronation Week" . . . Once, in Australia, they played by "royal command" for the then Duke and Duchess of York. . . . The actors are too modest to ascribe the sudden interest in their presence in London for the coronation as emanating from Buckingham palace. . . . Yet they are wondering. . . . In the mails recently they have been invited by a lord mayor, a governor of a province and a general who ranks very high to one fete or another plan for the Coronation. . . . The wages being offered them are their standard salaries, too. . . . It is a real temptation, particularly because the very gracious lady who is now Queen was unusually nice to the famous team of American comedians at their last meeting. . . . She asked them to visit the Duke and herself "back home" . . . In event that the King and Queen should drop in at the theater where the Olsen and Johnson tomfoolery happened to be current, the boys would rate a six-months engagement at fancy fees throughout the big cities and the provinces. . . . They have a contract calling for another motion picture to follow their "The Country Gentlemen" . . . This would conflict with a voyage overseas. . . . From New York, the importunities of Warner Brothers and Al Johnson are combining to bring them back to Broadway in a new musical comedy about to be tailored to their measure and the Fifty-Second Street theater. . . . Jolson and Jacob Wilk, who is now in charge of stories in the Warner New York office, bought the dramatic rights in 1914 to a magazine story. . . . The price was $50. . . .

AS THE YEARS HAVE PASSED, this ancient literary effusion seems to obsess the Messrs. Jolson and Wilk as something that must be brought to the stage. . . . On this, a quick answer is asked of the comedians, who, incidentally, after 24 years together rank as the veteran comedy-team of the stage. . . . It is pretty puzzling. . . . The boys wish to make the right move. . . . One thing is positive, whatever they do they'll do together. . . .

AND IN MEMORIAM, sort of, have you ever considered the end and endings which have split the famous comedy teams of the past generation. . . . Paul McCullough died tragically, severing the team of Clark and McCullough. . . . Jay Brener is still alive, but his partner, Bert Savoy, died when he was struck by a bolt of lightning. . . . Gallagher and Shean faded at the height of their career when Ed Gallagher was stricken with a mental ailment. . . . Van and Schenck, Montgomery and Stone, Doyle and Dixon, Williams and Walker, and a half dozen other famous combinations were ruined by the death of one of the partners.

Once Over Lightly:

The high scholastic standard demanded by one of the Greater Boston colleges is seen in the news that 245 students were "flunked" after the midyears. . . . 145 of them were sophomores. . . . Eddie De Lange is back in town. . . . Kiki Roberts, more attractive even in the days when she was the "headlines" made several of the nightspots after her performance last night at the Old Howard. . . . Barsanti is planning an entertainment policy, with Betty Burke, the Wakefield girl who came out first in a bugling contest at the American Legion convention in Cleveland, and Ray McPartland at the piano. . . . Miss Burke also sings. . . .

Eddie Shayne and Charlotte Armstrong, dancing at the Grove, are attracting a great deal of attention. . . . The girl is lovely and they dance like champions. . . . Muriel Crandall is at Legavgi's. . . . Young Happy fought one disappointing ring battle with Alf Lynch of Canada in the old days when Young Happy was Kid Francis. . . . With his $17 "net" under the tape wrapped around his right hand, Lynch failed to swing a jolting punch for an entire round. . . . So Young Happy went down as per agreement with the promoters from a shove to the shoulder in the second round. . . . The Coolidge Corner Theater installs "microphonic sound" Friday. . . . Polly Cotter, the post-debutante, is chairman of a committee of Sarah Lawrence College graduates, who are planning an affair called the "Ball Ball" at the Balinese Room of the Somerset next Wednesday. . . .

They are calling the opening night (Saturday) of the Brunswick Casino, under its new management, "Helen Morgan Night" . . . Miss Morgan will open tomorrow at Keith's Boston.

The Selectman Tells 'Em:

The Burlington page of the Wilmington News carries the following ad, under the heading, "Appreciation." "Despite the fact that I was the victim of the Vilest, Most Vicious and Most Vilifying Whispering Campaign ever directed against any candidate for public office in the Town of Burlington and initiated by a combination of Hypocrites, Drunkards, Reformed Drunkards, Ex-Boot Leggers, Cradle Robbers and Welfare Wood Thieves, I AM STILL YOUR SELECTMAN."

"It is indeed gratifying to know that there still exists in the Town of Burlington people who appreciate Cleanliness, Decency, Lack of Hypocrisy and Sincerity of Purpose. To the 419 Voters of That Type, I Say, Thank you."

George White's 'Scandals' At RKO Boston Tomorrow

For the modest price of a movie ticket, RKO Boston patrons will be privileged to see the 12th stage production of George White's "Scandals," which played to Manhattan and Chicago audiences at 34.40 top. Form in line for the opening show at the RKO Thursday morning.

Willis and Eugene Howard and Helen Morgan head the cast, and what could be fairer than that? Animate these irresistibly comic brothers and that striking all-around-a-planet ensemble are Sam, Ted and Ray, Gloria Rich, Fred Warratt, Harold Willard, Constance Carr, Elaine McGuire, Alma Saunders, Peggy Rudy and many others.

As a background for this constellation of stage stars, George White, heavily comical, extraordinary, has assembled from here, there and everywhere 50 of the most dazzling characters he could find.

Jack Yellen and Ray Henderson wrote the music and lyrics. The sketches are by George White and William K. Wells.

RKO Radio's "Criminal Lawyer" is the story of a "mouth piece" who is raised to the office of district attorney and who later turns on the gang that put him there when its leader commits murder.

'Green Light' On Met's Screen

Warner's hit production, "Green Light," and the "Swing Time" stage show hosted by Judy Canova and her brother and sister, Zella and Annie, will comprise the new bill at the Metropolitan theater, starting Thursday.

"Green Light," film adaptation of Lloyd C. Douglas' best-selling novel, is interpreted on the screen by Errol Flynn, Anita Louise and Margaret Lindsay in the leading roles.

The handsome Flynn portrays the young doctor who took the blame for a tragically bungled operation to protect an older surgeon, Anita Louise as Phyllis Dexter, and Margaret Lindsay as the nurse who helps to straighten out the young physician's involved existence provide the romantic angle.

Importantly cast in this excellent production are Cedric Hardwicke, Walter Abel, Henry Abel and Spring Byington. Frank Borzage directed.

The highly talented Canova family comes to the Met stage direct from their current air program. These hilariously outspun from the Met stage direct from their current air program. These hilariously outspun from the Met stage direct from their current air program.

LOVE GEM 'Camille' at Loew's Friday

M-G-M's production of "Camille" acclaimed by New York critics and moviegoers alike, as the greatest love story that has ever come to the screen, is scheduled to open Friday at Loew's State and Orpheum theaters.

The Dumas classic of the "Lady of the Camellias" stars Greta Garbo in what is said to be her finest role. It is the story of a beautiful, passionate woman, Marguerite Gautier, whose romance with the wealthy and wealthy Baron de Varville, is interrupted by her meeting with Armand Duval.

Marguerite and Armand discover that their love is stronger than destiny—and this is their tragedy.

Robert Taylor, handsomely and richly handsome of the country's famous movie stars, is the Armand of the story. Henry Danneberg, the richest girl's aunt.

Lionel Barrymore heads the excellent supporting cast, and there are also Elliott Allen, Jeanne Hall, Louise Linton and Laura Hope Crews.

Suggesting the feature is a selected list of short subjects topped by a Mickey Mouse entitled "Country Cousin," a miniature M-G-M musical comedy called "So Place Like Home" and the latest news reels.

Irving Berlin Film Comes To Keith's

The gay and diverting musical comedy film, "On the Avenue," starring Dick Powell, Madeline Carroll and Alice Faye and featuring those ridiculously funny Ritz Brothers, first of the RKO Keith's 55th anniversary hits, opens on Friday at the Keith Memorial theater, following a Thursday night preview at 10 o'clock.

Powell and the gorgeous Madeline Carroll are romantic partners in this lively Twentieth Century-Fox musical of a glib Broadway musical comedy author and actor whose film show includes a ball lampooning the private lives of America's richest girl and her father.

Miss Carroll is the poor, little rich girl and her father is portrayed by George Barler, Alan Mowbray plays the role of an explorer with notions of paying his seen with Robinsons. Miss Faye plays Powell's footlight vivacious and Cora Witherspoon, the richest girl's aunt.

Irving Berlin wrote some swell songs for "On the Avenue," namely "The Year's Kisses," "You're Laughing at Me," "Stunning on Park Avenue," "I've Got My Love to Keep Me Warm," "The Girl on the Police Gazette" and a novelty number, called "He Ain't Got Rhythm."

"You are so young . . . where can you have learned all you know about women like me?"

Garbo in the strong young arms of Robert Taylor . . . truly a lifetime of thrilling romance in one shining moment of ecstasy!

A GREAT AUTHOR'S STORY OF LOVE VS. DUTY

CHAPTER 37

"This girl has fallen hopelessly in love with a chap who has turned out to be a worthless lam."

"That's bad," said Endroit sympathetically. "Would you object to telling me just how I get in on it?"

"In coming to that. This young fellow is a doctor. I wouldn't if you might not have some counsel to offer in regard to his rehabilitation... But, first, may I proceed with Phyllis' story?"

Naturally I'm better posted with that part of it. Phyllis' doctor's mother was a patient of yours about a year ago and died. I believe in the Parkview Hospital."

Some pointed a finger at this point of her narrative, and Endroit, sternly clearing his throat, said he remembered the incident.

"Her father died, too," continued Sonia, "and her sister entered a convent. Phyllis came back home, though it wasn't just there was no home to come to, and immediately sought the advice of Duke Harcourt. He had known the family very well. It was there that I met her. I took her to live with me."

"Suggesting her, you mean?" Endroit's face was flushed.

"Not at all. Perhaps I should have told you earlier what my business is. I am the proprietor of an exclusive great shop."

"I can well believe it," the eyes lighted a little with undisturbed admiration.

"Thank you. Everyone likes pretty clothes, I think... So I took Phyllis into the shop, where she has been very useful to me, though I know she despised her job like the devil... A few months ago she quite often went to Trinity Cathedral to see Duke Harcourt—Phyllis met a very handsome young fellow who was there for a long private conference with the duke."

"I'm not surprised," Endroit interposed impatiently. "There's something positively fascinating about the duke's philosophy. The last time I met him—it was in his own library—it happened to be in the city—very shortly after Mrs. Dexter's death, by the way—and, knowing of their warm friendship, I wanted to talk to him."

Quick Love

"There he sat, telling his weight on his elbow, pith-shattered even looking at you, and through you, and beyond you, also, cursing at what he pleased to call 'The Long Parade'—his own phrase for the human scene. In that atmosphere, one seemed to be casually hypnotized out of one's participation in contemporary affairs and forced to view the pilgrimage objectively."

"I remember that while he was calmly pursuing his theme the air of a softly undulating, seaward, a black away, and the though flashed across my mind—'No matter. A few are hurt, here and there, some fall down and have to be gathered up that nothing else the Long Parade has to do.'"

"I'm not surprised," Endroit interposed impatiently. "There's something positively fascinating about the duke's philosophy. 'Little Suits' Loom Large on Spring Fashion Horizon

WE GIVE you the "little suit" And it's reign is sure to be long and interesting, productive of much chic for the girl who wants to look pretty as well as smart. These suits are springing up around town in such numbers, in such delicious colorings, and withal having so much variety of detail that there will not be a single wardrobe without its light, little suit. It's also surprising how fine a quality of wool, tweed or homespun can be used in such a suit. For instance, both Fashion Congress selections shown today are among the best of their kind, and each one is under thirty dollars!

Pale grey is a certain trend is tailored nicely in the suit at left, modeled by Miss Sally Scudler. Single-breasted, buttoning with two clever round pockets, high set lapels and a crisp navy and white polka dot scarf between them. Navy basket-weave straw is the hat, with a raised crown and two wooden tags bubbling along in back.

Thistle tweed with navy accents is the color theme of the other suit, modeled by Miss Florence Dwyer. And there's never been a color that "went" with so many other colors without playing any favorites! Thistle's equally perfect with garnet, heather pink, black, navy, or carmine. The tweed jacket of this suitingles its pockets, features the cardigan neckline, and does without buttons. The navy taffeta scarf is cross-banded in white. Notice that the off-the-face hat is tailored... it's called "Rubens Roll!"

For shopping information on either suit or hat, phone Annie Brink, Fashion Editor, L1Berry 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American.

DON'T BLAME GLANDS; CUT CALORIES

By IDA JEAN KAIN

IT may be glands, pothphagis or laziness that put you on the buxom side of streamlines, but no matter what the cause, diet is the important factor in weight control.

If there is the least thing wrong with your glands, you are prone to overwork it as an excuse for your weight and to minimize any tendency to overeat.

Glands or no glands, your over-weight means that you are eating too much for your needs. True, your body processes may be abnormally slow and you may burn very few calories, so that storage comes easier for you than most people, but it is an indisputable scientific fact that no excess of food as compared with your needs is responsible for your overweight.

Indeed, with exuberant ability the term used for glandular over-weight is a more important than ever that there be a decrease in the fat found in the diet. No change is made in the quality of the meat, but the quantity should be lowered to correspond with your economy low calorie requirements.

Whether or not you need to take something to speed up your metabolism is a matter for your doctor to decide, and only a doctor, thyroid or any product containing thyroid should be taken up on a medical man's advice and under his constant supervision. Although thyroid speeds up the metabolism and enables you to burn more food, it is as dangerous as dynamite and should be used with the same caution. It is a risky remedy, and its use as one doctor expressed it, "is to create one evil by creating another."

Calories are burned in 100 hours of glandular activity. So, before you blame your glands for your excess of calories, try eating your total calories to 1200 or 1400 per day. It will stimulate your metabolism—extra eating—no the least, to create one evil by creating another.

Since most people have to eat in the same extent that they have to exercise, saving calories is a natural suggestion. You may eat too much, but if you eat above normal weight you at least eat too much of the wrong food, and exercise too little to burn all the calories; for every last calorie you eat, you must burn it as energy or stored as fat.

The answer to your weight problem is more exercise or less food, and probably both measures, taking less cream, butter and lard in general, less sugar and starch, and more fruits and vegetables, will decrease the calories and assure the vitamins.

Jeanette Winchell Makes Debut At Algonquin Club Luncheon

By BETTY ALDEN

THE LAST FEW PARTIES of the debutante of the season have been held at the Algonquin Club. The last of these was the luncheon given by the club on Wednesday afternoon, February 17, at which time Jeanette Winchell made her debut. The debutante was accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Winchell, and her father, Mr. Winchell, who was also present. The luncheon was a very successful one, and the debutante was well received by all those present. The Algonquin Club is a very popular place for such occasions, and it is always a pleasure to see the debutantes of the season.

Gomez Fight Probe TO FLOP

New York, Feb. 17 (AP) - Along Broadway today, the fight mob is laying 10 to 1 on no taking. That nobody involved in the recent Jack Torrance dry tank job shows up for the boxing commission's investigation.

The fight mob is betting heavily on the outcome of the Gomez fight. They are laying 10 to 1 on no taking, which means that they believe that the fight will not take place. This is a very unusual bet for a fight mob, and it suggests that they are very confident in their prediction.

The fight mob is betting heavily on the outcome of the Gomez fight. They are laying 10 to 1 on no taking, which means that they believe that the fight will not take place. This is a very unusual bet for a fight mob, and it suggests that they are very confident in their prediction.

101 Stitches

101 Stitches, a dark bay colt, was the favorite in the eighth race at Hialeah Park today. He was owned by the Knute Rock Stable and was trained by the same stable. He was ridden by jockey Gene Ahern. He was the only horse in the race to pull a fast one, and he won the race by a wide margin.

STABILIZATION

Stability IS FIRST Requirement

By HUGH F. BRADSHAW

Unstable monetary conditions in both England and France are a definite barrier to stabilization of principal world currencies, if one may judge by the comments of Professor O. M. W. Sprague in Boston this week.

The renowned monetary expert outlined his ideas in an address to the Boston Club of Alumni of the Harvard Business School.

Pointing out that stabilization could not be achieved until there was monetary stability, Professor Sprague pointed out that the French had made a big mistake in converting the franc to a fixed value of 100 francs to the dollar. He said that in establishing a fixed value, the market would have to pay the price of the franc in terms of the dollar, and that this was not a desirable situation.

While the Harvard expert saw some progress toward monetary stability, he pointed out that the French had made a big mistake in converting the franc to a fixed value of 100 francs to the dollar. He said that in establishing a fixed value, the market would have to pay the price of the franc in terms of the dollar, and that this was not a desirable situation.

STOCKS Turn QUIET UNDERTONE FIRM

New York, Feb. 17.—Stocks turned quiet today, after a brisk first-hour recovery had ended three days of steadily declining values. Light trading brought leaders back from early peaks, but the general undertone continued firm.

Wall Street's reaction to the exchange rate bonanza "freerider" on Friday reaction was a note of approval in most quarters and the step had little effect on market sentiment, bolstered by a fresh crop of bullish 1936 earnings reports and additional favorable business news.

Leadership was retained, playing was copper and motors, then to steel and some utilities. Quiet in the low end of the market, confidence on the part of the French market was not enough to support the higher figure.
